DFDia Lands Google Design Project

PHOENIX (April 4, 2006) – DFDia, the interior architecture affiliate of DFD CornoyerHedrick (DFD), was recently selected by Google to design the search-engine company’s planned Phoenix-area office.

According to the Google online press center, the new office will be home to a variety of departments, including IT support, engineering and operations.

Niki Possas, DFDia director of design and principal of the firm, says the opportunity to work on the project is significant for a multitude of reasons.

“Being selected by Google, arguably the world’s most well-known online search engine, is a testament to the quality of the design work DFDia produces,” she says.

“Furthermore, we look forward to the challenge the project presents and are eager to offer intelligent design solutions in support of the important business functions that will be carried out at Google’s new location.”

One of the largest commercial interior firms in the state, DFDia comprises the business sectors of interior architecture, facilities planning and tenant improvements. The firm was selected number one in Arizona Business Magazine’s Best of Arizona Business rankings for 2006.
